

BIG CROWDS AT MOKENA FESTIVAL

H. F. Yunker, Orland Stock Dealer Hurt In Fall from Hay Mow

H. F. Yunker, widely known stock dealer of Orland Park, met with a serious accident Monday when he fell from a hay mow in the barn on his farm located one mile east of Orland Park on 143rd street.

Mr. Yunker was knocked unconscious by the fall and sustained several broken ribs and internal injuries. Dr. S. S. Leavitt of Orland Park was called and took the injured man to Silver Cross hospital in Joliet.

Numerous x-rays were taken to determine the extent of his injuries. From latest reports, Mr. Yunker is somewhat improved.

Frankfort Church To Hold Rally Day

The members of St. Peter's church and Bible school will observe Rally Day next Sunday in a special service at 10:15 a.m., Central Standard Time.

After the opening exercises the first part of the service will consist of exercises by the children's division of the Bible school under the leadership of Mrs. Fred Whitlark.

After the offering and announcements the Young people and Adult departments under the leadership of Mr. Wesley Hollstein will conduct a Round Table discussion upon the topic: Is it possible to lead an effective Christian life without regular attendance at Bible School and Worship Service?

If this subject can arouse as much interest among the audience as it has already aroused among those who are to participate in the discussion you will find it worth the while to cancel other engagements and attend Rally Day Services at St. Peter's church.

Former Tavern Owner Commits Suicide By Hanging

Henry Martinson of Blue Island, who has been operating a peanut vending business among the various taverns in Cook County committed suicide last Saturday night by hanging himself.

Just what prompted this deed will never be learned as he did not leave any final note. On Saturday he had given his land lady a sum of money saying perhaps he would not have any use of it. He also gave the keys to the peanut machines to a friend of his saying he did not have any further use of them. He was last seen alive Saturday evening, Sunday morning when he failed to appear for breakfast the land lady went to his room and found the body hanging from the door.

It is thought that the man committed suicide while in a fit of despondency. At one time Martinson had operated a saloon in Mokena and later in Blue Island.

Funeral services were held from the Halinan Funeral Home in Blue Island Wednesday with burial in the Tinley Park cemetery.

Attend Silver Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Clark have returned from the east where they visited their grandson Jack in Ohio State University and Hunting, W. Va., and Gallapolo, Ohio where Mr. Clark was born. They attended a Silver wedding anniversary of a cousin at Crown City Ohio, and their son Dr. Ted Clark of Marshfield, Ill., accompanied them on their trip.

Orland RNA Camp Has 40th Birthday

On Friday evening, Sept. 29th, Laurel Camp of Royal Neighbors of America will celebrate its 40th birthday in Creer's Hall. There will be a special program to mark the occasion. Mrs. Anna Cooley, former Supervisor, and now one of the State Officers, has promised to bring out one or more of the State officers from Chicago to participate in the program.

A very interesting evening is being planned. There will be refreshments and fun galore and every Royal Neighbor is urged to attend.

A special surprise has been prepared by the Camp Grade, so don't miss being present.

Orland Lad Drowns In Clay Hole

Robert Liliwitz, aged 15 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Liliwitz of Orland Park, drowned in a clayhole along 143rd street several miles east of Orland Park Thursday afternoon about 4:50 o'clock.

In company with Donald Brennan and Robert Miller, the Liliwitz boy went to the clay hole after school. The other two boys went in swimming, but Robert did not. He started to swing on a rope fastened to an over hanging tree branch when he suddenly dropped off the rope into the water. His companions saw him fall into the water, and when he failed to come to the surface they ran to nearby neighbors and told what had happened. The state highway police were notified at once. A boat was procured from the Orland Lake and the pulmotor of the Midlothian Fire Department was also brought out to the scene of the accident. The police with the aid of grappling hooks finally raised the boy's body and the pulmotor squad worked for nearly two hours on him, but at 7 o'clock Dr. S. S. Leavitt of Orland Park pronounced the boy dead.

Robert drowned in about ten feet of water. The clay hole in question varies in depth from 5 to 30 feet deep.

Orland Church to Hold Fall Festival

The St. Michael's Catholic church at Orland Park is planning for a fall festival to be held Oct. 15 in the church hall. There will be a country store, various booths in which numerous articles will be on sale. A chicken supper will also be served. The affair will continue after noon and evening. Everyone cordially invited to attend.

Orland PTA Starts New Member Drive

The first meeting of the new school year of the Orland Park PTA was held Thursday evening, Sept. 14 in the Orland Park school domestic science room. An excellent turnout of the old members was present and many new members were added to the membership list. The entire school board membership was present and enrolled as members. Walter R. Schussler, Jr., pres. of the board was the guest speaker and explained in detail the status of the main project which was approved with the last referendum vote. Principal Jerome Linden spoke on the school organization of the coming year and especially on the high school new curriculum.

A letter of resignation from Mrs. Edna Hewson treasurer for the last year was read and accepted. Mrs. Hewson has been in ill health and asked to be relieved of her duties. A new treasurer will be named by the executive committee at the next meeting. A very touching memorial resolution was read in honor of the late Mary Kramer for many years chairman of the Sunshine or sick committee.

The officers for the following year are: Mrs. Lawrence Uthe, pres., Mrs. Ralph Town, vice pres., Mrs. Earl Reich, sec. Mrs. Sherman S. Knox will have charge of the programs for the coming year. The new treasurer and the balance of the members of the executive staff will be announced later. Following the meeting a get acquainted social hour was held and refreshments were served by the members of the executive committee. The Orland Park PTA is entering the 12th year of useful service to the school and to the community. Throughout these years it has proven its worth as a great force for civic usefulness. Every parent of a child of school age and every friend of the public school should be a member and participate in its activities. Every citizen of the Orland community is urged to come to the meetings and join the Association.

Birthday Party

Robinson's Tavern is giving a birthday party Saturday evening for Miss Evelyn Wachter. Evelyn's sisters will furnish the dance music.

Mokena Civic Assn., Secures Better Service

Through the efforts of the Mokena Civic Association for improved train service on the Rock Island railroad, Pres. R. A. Bechstein of this Association was advised Thursday morning that with the resumption of Central Standard time the Rock Island will provide two extra train stops for Mokena. The first train will leave Chicago at 6:15 p.m. and will make the run in 48 minutes to Mokena providing express train service.

For quite some time Mokena has been without a midnight train from Chicago. The last train out of the city arrived in Mokena about 1:30 a.m. Under the new arrangement the train leaving Chicago at 10:25 p.m. will arrive at Mokena at about 11:25 p.m. thus making it possible for people of this territory caring to attend theaters in Chicago and transact business later in the day having an opportunity of arriving home before midnight. This new service will be greatly appreciated by the patrons of the Rock Island railroad.

Rob Orland Park Lumber Office

When George Steinhagen, manager of the Beatty Lumber Company's office at Orland Park, opened his office Tuesday morning, he was surprised to find that the place had been burglarized. A new typewriter worth about $50 had been taken and a Burrough's adding machine. Nothing else in the office was molested and no attempt was made to open the safe.

Entrance was gained through a private garage adjoining the office when the rear door was smashed. No trace of the robbers has been found. The management of the lumber company is offering a cash reward leading to the identity and arrest of the guilty parties.

To Hold Hybrid Seed Corn Days

Farmers of this district should not miss the educational opportunity afforded in visiting the Thomson Top Yield Hybrid Seed Fields, north of Frankfort, on the field days as advertised in these columns, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Carnival A Success

The Episcopal church carnival held recently at New Lenox was a grand success, and the members of the vestry wish to take this opportunity of thanking all those who assisted at the booths and for the very generous donations received.

Mokena Civic Ass'n To Meet Monday

The Mokena Civic Association will meet next Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Immanuel Lutheran Church parlors. All members are expected to attend. Reports on the second annual fall festival will be read and other interesting matters pertaining to the activities of the club will be presented before the Association.

Last Outdoor Movie of Season

Next Wednesday night the last out door moving picture of the season will be held in Mokena. Real entertainment is in store for everyone. A George O'Brien picture entitled "O'Malley of the Mounted" will be the feature. If the weather is too cool the movie will be held in the Hatch Hall.

Open Social Season

The St. Mary Parish at Mokena is opening its fall program of social activities with a bunco party at the St. Mary hall Friday night, September 22nd. Everyone invited.

Set Your Clocks Back Sunday

Daylight Saving Time will end this Saturday night. Central standard time will be in effect from Sunday on. Be sure to set your clocks or watches back an hour Saturday night.

Chas. Pfeiffer New E. J. & E. Road Master

Chas. Pfeiffer formerly of Frankfort now of Joliet was promoted to the office of Road Master of the E.J. & E. railroad last Saturday. He has been in the employ of this railroad for 35 years. Four years ago he was promoted to the office of Supervisor, after 3 years as service as foreman at Frankfort. Mr. Pfeiffer succeeds A. L. Muschat who has retired from service after 20 years as roadmaster for the E.J. & E.

Red Cross Appeal To Local Chapter

The following appeal from the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross has been received by Mrs. Sherman S. Knox chairman of the Orland Park unit.

"The women of America are again called upon to render volunteer service for relief of the war victims in Europe. A great need for surgical dressings, garments and similar supplies will arise as the war operations continue and we are asking all of our units and subunits to prepare to meet their share of the need. We have already received orders for an unlimited amount of hospital garments and refugee clothing as well as surgical dressings and garments, both for the soldiers and children as well as layettes for the babies and dresses for women and clothes for boys.

"We have already received specifications for the surgical dressings and are awaiting definite instructions on the refugee garments which should be available for our units within a few days. I would suggest that you contact your local organization such as Woman's clubs, PTA, Legion Auxiliary, Fraternal Societies etc., and enlist their cooperation and request them to appoint a chairman for their organization and to register at our headquarters and through your chairman for the services in which they will qualify.

"The instructions in making surgical dressings at present will be conducted at our headquarters. It will be most helpful however, if your volunteer chairman will take the instructions and in turn be prepared to teach all of the groups in your own community and be responsible for the inspection of the work. We know that we may count on loyal support in this grave emergency."

It is hoped that every organization in the community will respond to the appeal. The Orland PTA have already designated Mrs. Ralph Town who will take the instructions in surgical dressings and the Orland Park Woman's club have named Mrs. Harold Kinney who will supervise the Sewing classes.

Anyone in the community who desires to aid in the work can do so by contacting the local Red Cross chairman of Orland Park, Mrs. Sherman S. Knox. Definite plans for organized effort will be presented in these columns in the near future.

Mokena Home Coming Grosses Over $900; Many Prizes Awarded

It is estimated that approximately 3,000 persons attended the second annual Home-coming and Fall Festival sponsored by the Mokena Civic Association on last Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Fall Festival grounds located on the Rock Island depot grounds on the south side of Front street which was closed from the Aug. Braun pool hall corner to the Wannemacher store. This portion of the street was used as a midway. The opening night being warm there was a very large attendance. The various exhibit booths, games and tents were largely patronized. The new dance floor also drew a good crowd. The Mokena chapter of the American Red Cross had an emergency tent on the grounds and the boy and girl scouts also had tents. At the boy scout tent orders were taken for cute articles of wood craft made by the boy scouts.

A huge tent was used to house the exhibits of grain, vegetables, fruits, antiques, canned goods, etc. The Geo. Thomson Hybrid seed corn exhibit in charge of George Brandau also received a good play. The Mokena Garden club had a very outstanding exhibit located at the site of the old depot well.

The Woman's Athletic club had an archery range which was patronized by both men and women. Many expert shots made the bull's eye.

The Mokena Fire department had a dart ball tent in charge of Albert Braun. This drew many enthusiasts of this sport.

The News-Bulletin booth attracted hundreds of visitors who signed their register book. Visitors were from all over the country even some from California. Souvenirs of various kinds were distributed at this booth.

On Saturday the festival opened with a decorated bicycle parade for which prizes were awarded as follows:

Best costumed rider, Balloon girl, Audrey Neithammer, best groups of red white and blue, Ruth and Ann Stanger, Rita Tierney. Most Comic red head. The judges were John C. Polock and Mrs. Schaub.

On Saturday night the following special prizes were awarded:

Mix Master to Aneta Dath, 8601 S. Lowe Ave., Chicago.
Toast Master to Mrs. C. E. Stermer, 7615 Eggleston Ave., Chicago.
Electric floor lamp, Dr. E. G. McMahon, Mokena.

Saturday evening, the special feature on the program in the nature of a parade headed by the Mokena and Frankfort bands. A team and hay rack in charge of Walter McGovney was the center of attraction. A group costumed in the days of long ago depicted the early days in this territory and showed progress up to the present time. Col. and Mrs. Don C. Hall presented a very striking appearance in their old time costumes. Mr. McGovney was wearing a silk stove pipe hat and dressed in the period of the early 60's, made a very striking resemblance of Abraham Lincoln. An old time Ford, one of the earliest models sold in Blue Island, also was in the parade. It was driven by Louis Rauch of Blue Island. A miniature one-lung midget automobile was in charge of Phil Hacker. (Continued on Inside Page)

START WORK ON NEW TINLEY PARK CHURCH

The congregation of the Tinley Park Methodist church is preparing for the erection of a new church home on the site of the present Tinley Park Methodist church. The present building is to be moved to the rear of the church lot and a fine new edifice will be erected in its place. The present building will be used for church services and Sunday School until the new church is completed when it will be used for a community center.

The present Methodist congregation is composed of two groups which united sometime ago. Following the destruction of the German Methodist church shown in the accompanying picture by lightning over a year ago, the German Methodist group and the Tinley English Methodist congregation finally united into the present congregation and it was decided that a new church home was much in need and after much deliberation it was decided to erect the new church in Tinley Park. More details regarding the new edifice will be printed next week.

Ground for the new church will be broken either this Saturday or Monday morning.

Will Hold Autumn Party

"An Autumn Party" sponsored by the Palos Woman's club will be held Saturday evening, Sept. 30 at the Southmoor Country Club. There will be dancing from 9:30 to 1:30 to Wally Bornemann and His Band. The proceeds are to go to the further enlargement of the Community House fund of the Woman's Club.

Mrs. Geo. B. Ward, Finance chairman, and her committee consisting of Mrs. Carl Peterson, Miss Marie Kotrba and Mrs. Joel L. Collins, will be in charge.

Mrs. Joel L. Collins, Press Chair.

Special Meeting

The Mokena village board met in special session Monday night to approve and pay claims for the work done in the village streets recently. The improved streets are being paid for out of Mokena's share of the state gas tax.

Is Moscow-Berlin Axis Being Formed? Europe Can't Decide, But Has Doubts

Soviet and Germany Still Suspect Each Other Despite Shouting Over Non-Aggression Pact; But Does Hitler Hold the Upper Hand?

By RONALD CAPPER

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PARIS.—While France and Britain cock one eye down a rifle barrel at Germany, the other eye never veers from the most enigmatic question mark facing war-mad Europe—Soviet Russia. Will the Old world's No. 1 diplomat, Josef Stalin, come to Germany's aid under the trade and non-aggression treaties those nations signed just before the war? Is Comrade Stalin merely playing Germany for all she is worth? Or has Adolf Hitler outsmarted his new friend, forcing Stalin to aid the Nazi cause?

The implications of a German-Soviet alliance are tremendous. Indeed, this possibility has worried European observers ever since Adolf Hitler came to power, for together these military juggernauts could be fearsome.

There is no longer any problem of ideology standing between the nations, although American Nazis and Communists would have us believe the two theories are at sword's points. Ten years ago this was true, but through the ensuing years Germany and Russia have approached a similarity.

Watons Surprisingly Alike

Nazism thrives on a principle of racial superiority which states that an individual race is entitled to rule the world. Bolshevism operates on the opposite principle, that all men are equal, and without distinction. Since neither idea is practical in application, both the Reich and the Soviet can overlook their theories to settle more realistic problems.

What really counts is Nazism's seven-year swing from an attempt to save capitalism to a concept of state-controlled capitalism that is not far removed from the Russian system. From this parallel purpose might spring almost anything.

Yet a study of Soviet history during post-World War history will show its foreign policy has pursued one aim consistently and with considerable success. That aim has been prevention of a German, Italian, French and British alliance opposed to Russia. So long as this "ganging up" is averted, the Soviet will be free to complete its big task of internal development. Here's how they've accomplished it thus far:

Didn't Like Hitler.

In 1922 the Soviet signed a trade treaty with Germany, then susceptible, to any sort of back-slapping after its rough treatment at Versailles. But as a matter of expediency Russia drifted away from Germany when Hitler came to power. They didn't like him.

Science Seeks Clue To 'Misplaced' Vein Of Volcanic Lava

BOULDER DAM, COLO.—Ten miles south of this massive concrete structure geologists have discovered a "missing link" in volcanic history—a lava "dike" formed in gravel.

How it got there is the problem worrying Prof. Ian Campbell of the California Institute of Technology and Dr. E. T. Schenk of the national park service, who have decided the "dike" is a mere geological youngster of some 25,000 years. Never before has lava been found cutting through gravel, and how it forced its way into a porous rock of this type in such clean-cut fashion is a big mystery.

"It is difficult to believe," the geologists have reported, "that an open fissure four feet wide could have been formed or maintained in these gravels while the dike magma was pouring in from below."

"A possible explanation may be that the first surge of lava was rapidly chilled by contact with the cold and perhaps water-filled gravel. This chilled glass then formed a seal which prevented any side escape as the remaining bulk of the magma pushed in."

"Spectacular too, is the texture of the dike itself. Most dikes that are intruded into the shallower parts of the earth's crust are very fine grained."

denly and signed the treaty with Germany.

Two Schemers Work.

This is the supreme test of Soviet diplomatic wisdom, for Josef Stalin, smart though he may be, is dealing with another smart schemer in Adolf Hitler. There is good reason to believe Germany got the upper hand during the tense pre-war days when Russia hesitated over ratifying the non-aggression pact.

Gloating over her spotlighted position, holding the balance of peace or war, the Soviet might have maintained this enviable status if Hitler had not been equally alert. Der Fuehrer knew the British ambassador to Berlin has always favored a policy of Anglo-German friendship against Russia. Furthermore, he knew Russia was aware of Sir Neville's ambitions. That is why the ambassador was kept busy commuting between Berlin and London with diplomatic notes which might have led to an Anglo-German settlement.

So uneasy did Russia become that the supreme Soviet council met hurriedly and ratified the German non-aggression pact within 20 minutes after Premier Vyacheslav Molotov introduced it.

Suspect Each Other.

But this hesitancy, this obvious "squeeze" play, does not speak well for future Soviet-German relations. Only a few days before the ratification, Russian deputies applauded a mock battle in Red square where young Soviet fighters routed an "invading force" clad in German field-gray uniforms. The big question now is whether Hitler has outsmarted Stalin to such a degree that the Soviet cannot regain its former position.

Russia has things to fear from Germany. Should Poland fall, the convenient "buffer" territory between the Reich and the Soviet would disappear, bringing Hitler closer to his long coveted Ukraine. Should this issue develop into war between the two nations (much to the democracies' glee) no one can tell whether Russia's mammoth but untried army could stop the highly efficient Prussian military machine.

Here's New Way to Cut Taxes In Your Town: Grow a Forest

WASHINGTON.—Raise a forest if you want to lower your taxes. That's the advice of F. A. Silcox, chief of the United States forest service, who suggests that American communities might follow the example of European towns in licking the tax ogre.

The idea is already catching hold. Some 1,500 cities, towns, villages, counties, school districts, churches and townships now own about 3,000,000 acres of forests, and new plots are being reported to the forest service almost every day.

By selling fuel, pulpwood, Christmas trees, maple syrup, nuts and other forest products, communities can take a substantial cut from their annual tax levy. What's more, the forests offer new playgrounds, fish and game reserves and recreation facilities, besides protecting city watersheds and providing employment.

Swedish Forest Runs Street Cars.

The community forest idea started in Europe, where such famous preserves as Germany's Black forest and those at Fontainebleau and Versailles have been producing revenue for years. At Orson, Sweden, the forest provides enough to pay all local taxes and supply free street car and telephone service.

America's oldest forest is at Newington, N. H., which was started in 1710. Since 1832 it has provided fuel for the church, the poor people and the school, plus $5,238 in cash which paid community debts, improved the village buildings and helped build a library and school.

Seattle Forest Shows Profit.

Wisconsin has adopted the program scientifically. Each year the state pays 10 cents an acre to the county owning the forest, until the production stage is reached. Then the state gets its money back as timber is cut.

CHRISTMAS TREES—Here's one product from your community forest that helps cut the local tax burden. There's also maple syrup in some localities, fuel, pulpwood, etc.

Seattle has the largest municipal forest, covering 67,000 acres. The city claims to have sold more than $1,000,000 worth of timber, which is more than the initial cost of land and trees.

Mr. Silcox is sold on the idea: "It doesn't take much money to start a forest," he said. "Most of them can be developed on cheap land, and there are millions of acres of tax-delinquent land that can be put to work. One of the great values of the project is the opportunity it affords for replacing a public dole by worthwhile work."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Curious position in which the United States now finds itself with respect to the European war... Swing to President's neutrality stand since war broke out... Nationalization of electric industry being considered... Political significance of the Mississippi gubernatorial primary.

WASHINGTON.—There may have been more curious positions in which allegedly neutral nations have found themselves than the United States now occupies with respect to the present war in Europe, but the most studious of diplomats are unable to remember an example.

Diplomats were a bit surprised at the fervor of President Roosevelt's fireside chat with the nation. He followed very closely, they point out, the pattern of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's speech a few days before as to being neutral in fact, but not neutral in thought.

Johnson was a little blunter. He made no bones about the impossibility of not being against a nation which uses force instead of persuasion, which has no regard for its word, and which threatens the peace of the world every time it wants anything. Roosevelt was much milder. But he also mentioned the use of force, and admitted that he could not ask the citizens of this country, as Woodrow Wilson had done in 1914, to be "neutral in thought."

There was another bit of Roosevelt's address which was generally approved by the partisans of Britain and France, and was gall and wormwood to the pro-Nazis. This was his insistence that there should be no profiteering on any commodities which the men, women and children might need in the war-stricken countries.

As mere words these are not unneutral. But when it is realized that Britain and France can buy all of these commodities in the United States that they want, allowing for certain losses through submerging of the supply ships, but that it is practically impossible for Germany to be so supplied, the evenhanded justice disappears.

Swing to President's Side Since War Broke Out

There is some doubt now, on this same point, whether the embargo provision of the neutrality act applying to "arms, ammunition and implements of war" will be repealed. The President wanted that very much during the last session. He could have had his way if the repealer could have been gotten to a vote in the senate. It was obvious that there were enough opponents of repeal to talk the change to death. So, in the desire to reach adjournment, it was abandoned.

At the time inside administration officials figured, on the basis of their knowledge of the situation in Europe, that the odds for war were about three to two. However, they also figured that if the embargo could be repealed the odds would be reversed, thus becoming three to two against war.

There is no doubt that there has been a swing in sentiment toward the President's side since the war broke out. It is just a question of how many "incidents" it would take to so inflame the country against the Nazis that the only question would be when the United States would get into the war on the side of Britain and France.

But it would be a simple matter, now, to force through the change the President has wanted. There are some senators still who believe it would be virtually an act of war, and calculated to get the United States into the war, but there are not enough of them to make a strong filibuster—with no date for the ending of a session agreed upon.

Consider Nationalization Of The Electric Industry

Nationalization of the electric industry is one of the first moves planned by New Dealers when and if the United States becomes involved in the war. The only question is whether congress would be willing.

But the inner circle is not worrying about that question. There is no thought in the minds of the left wingers that, in the rush to give the administration every power it might ask for war purposes, control of such a vital element as power would not be included.

In the last war it was the railroads. But the motive, as well as the situation, would be different. In the first place, while some of the then heads of the administration may have hoped that the government would operate the railroads forever, most of the driving force, including the thought of President Woodrow Wilson, was for returning the railroads as soon as the emergency was over.

This time the allegation that taking over the electric industry was necessary for war purposes would be an excuse, not the real reason. The real reason is that insiders in the administration are firmly convinced that government ownership of the electric industry would be a real blessing for the people of the country as a whole.

There is another important difference in the situation of the railroads, during that terrible winter of 1917-1918, and that of the electric industry today. In the World War the railroads were almost collapsed. Meanwhile the weather, plus trucks for whose weight and power the roads had not been calculated, had made the highways sorry substitutes for the steel roads.

The rush of getting our own troops and supplies to Atlantic seaports, plus the necessity for keeping up that vital flow of supplies to the hard-pressed allies, was terrific. So the government took over the railroads.

Government Control Left Railroads in Bad Shape

But consider for a moment what was the chief reason why their taking over by the government was so essential. It was to get the roads out from under government regulation! So long as the roads were in private hands any collusion, any exchanging of services, any agreements that A would handle this territory and B that, while C would handle only through business, would have been frightful affronts to the interstate commerce commission. In fact, such practices would not have been tolerated for a moment.

It never occurred to anyone, of course, that this could have been solved by the simple decision by congress that for the period of the emergency all restrictions except as to rates and safety were abrogated.

Yet after the war no one denied that the only advantage from government operation was this short-circuiting of federal regulation. In fact, there was a terrific rush to get the roads back into private hands, and there is little doubt that if the war had continued much longer the stupid inefficiency of government operation would have more than offset the advantages of removing government regulation.

So obvious and true was this, along about the time the roads were handed back to their private owners—in such bad shape that they have never fully recovered—that several ardent government ownership advocates moaned that this unfortunate experience had "put the cause of government ownership back for 50 years."

Political Significance Of Mississippi Primary

There is no discounting the effect of the Mississippi gubernatorial primary on the possible nomination of President Roosevelt for a third term, if the Chief Executive decides he wants a third term. Victory of Paul B. Johnson, on a pro-Roosevelt ticket, and with the support of Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, over former Gov. Martin S. Conner, who had the support of Sen. Pat Harrison, is highly important in calculating the stand that the Mississippi delegation may take at the Democratic national convention next June.

Bilbo has been an out-and-out third-termer for Roosevelt. Harrison has said little on the subject, but his plain sympathies have been with the group of Southern Conservatives including Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia, Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina, "Cotton Ed" Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina, and Walter F. George of Georgia.

For many years the practice of the Mississippi democracy has been to put both its United States senators on the delegation it sent to national conventions. But also for time out of mind the practice has been to bind the delegation by the unit rule. This means that the 18 votes she casts at these party assemblies must be cast all together, and that how they are cast is determined by a majority vote.

So while Senator Harrison may be one of the delegates, and in fact probably will be a very influential one, it is also probable now that the friends of Bilbo and Governor Johnson (as he will be then) will be able to muster a majority of the delegation. Which means, unless something unforeseen should happen, that Mississippi's 18 votes will be cast for the renomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Reservations That Must Be Given Consideration

While this is the obvious political deduction from the primary, especially in view of Johnson's very large majority considering the size of the vote, there are a few reservations. For one thing, it must be remembered that Harrison did not make any speeches in favor of Conner, and, that despite the knowledge that Harrison was for him, many of Harrison's friends have never forgiven Conner for his race against Harrison last time Harrison was re-elected to the senate. Conner at that time made slurring references to the way Pat spent his time in Washington, giving the impression that he was often on the links of the Burning Tree Golf club when he should have been tending to the interests of Mississippi at the Capitol.

Another factor is that, according to various polls, sentiment among the Democrats of that section does not approach a majority for a Roosevelt third term. So the question is whether Johnson, and for that matter Bilbo, will take that side of the question next year.

Pot and Pan Holders That Hang in a Row

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A GREEN and white kitchen is as fresh and crisp as a lettuce leaf. I stepped into one the other day with white walls, green floor and green organdy curtains. Everything was green and white, and over the stove hung a set of patchwork pot holders like a row of bright green and white tiles. All of us love old quilt patterns. For those who do not have time to make quilts, here is a modern use for your favorite designs.

Perhaps you were put to bed as a child under this eight-pointed star? The sketch gives the dimensions for the patterns for the two triangles used in making it for the pot holder. Piece eight small squares of two triangles; then eight oblong blocks of three triangles. A layer of sheet wadding is used for padding. The backing for the holder is white. The three layers are quilted together by sewing just inside the white triangles of the pieced top.

Have you sent for your copy of the new Sewing Book No. 37? Every homemaker will want a copy for it contains useful ideas for home decorating; as well as original ideas for things to use as gifts, and to sell at bazaars. You will be delighted with this new book. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

Voltaire Born Arouet

The great French poet, dramatist and philosopher known to the world as Voltaire, was Francois Marie Arouet, born in 1694, the son of Francois and Marie Marguerite Daumart Arouet. At the age of 24 he was imprisoned in the Bastille for writing verses that displeased the regent of France. During this imprisonment he changed his name to Arouet de Voltaire. But as time passed the "Arouet" was dropped and he became known simply as Voltaire.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Seven men in all: seven men with leathern skins; calloused, overlarge hands, stolid faces, unkempt hair and more-or-less tattered clothes; men who had been born in the swamp and raised there; who tilled tiny tracts of clayey earth when the spirit moved; who had ruined their digestions with too much fresh pork; who fished indifferently for porgie and mullet and eel and sucker and sunfish; who shot—in season—deer, possum, coon, rabbit, squirrel, duck, quail and turkey; who accepted the gray drabness of Big Moccasin Swamp as the only thing they knew; whose private lives were sordid and, on occasion, unethetically immoral . . . but who prayed loudly and frequently and considered themselves very virtuous men indeed.

The assembled crusaders appeared to be startlingly indifferent to the fact that they were about to take human life. All except one little man—a man smaller even than Clem Ross—who had been quaffing sparingly from the jug and whose beady eyes moved furtively from face to face, as though to find an ally in his contemplated desertion. He said, whiningly, "You reckon there ain't no danger, Jeff?"

"Who's a-goin' to know we done it?"

"Somebody's liable to suspect, ain't they?"

"Naaa! Whole county will say Thank You when we finish."

"But Jeff . . ."

"Ain't gittin' skeered, are you?"

"No-o. But if anything went wrong . . ."

"Nothin' ain't goin' wrong."

"S'posin' . . . s'posin' there's trouble?"

"Ain't a-goin' to be no trouble. We got guns an' a rope. We take him out an' string him up. Oh, if things look mean, a gun can go off—kind of accidental—an' Barney Hamilton will be just as dead. Don't the Good Book say 'A life fo' a life'?"

"It sho' do."

"Ain't we been commanded to do this by the preachers?"

"Yeh . . . but they didn't ezactly say nothin' 'bout no lynchin'."

"An' besides," stated Jeff, "if the She'll be to git set on making trouble fo' somebody, he'd arrest these city folks. Not us."

"You reckon?"

"I'm sure. We got votes."

Mob spirit. Courage of numbers. Colossal ignorance and stupid piety. Class hatred. Sense of security. Stimulus of raw whiskey. Righteousness. False logic. Herd instinct. Leadership. Grim hysteria.

Thus mobs have always been created; thus they are aroused to peaks of insensate, homicidal fury. Thus they justify the unjustifiable. And dusk—closing down over Big Moccasin Swamp—cast sinister shadows and evil invitation.

Just before dark an automobile appeared, bumping nervously over the corduroy road. Dan Creedon and Babe Henkel stepped out. Babe was dressed in unobtrusive brown. Her lips were tight and there was high unnatural color in her cheeks.

Babe stared at the swamp angels. But she said nothing, gave no sign of approval or disapproval. It was Dan Creedon who talked. He asked, "Everything ready, Butler?"

"I reckon."

"When do we go?"

"Not yit awhile. Got to wait until they have a chance to finish supper."

"Why?"

"Give the darkies a chance to git away. We don't crave to be seen by nobody."

"How do we get there?"

"Walk. Tain't fur."

"O. K." Dan Creedon joined Babe and spoke in a whisper. "What a lousy gang."

Babe said, briefly, "They'll do."

"Yeh . . . they'll do anything."

Then, "You're not changing your mind, Babe?"

Her eyes were like ice. "Barney Hamilton didn't give Kirk a chance to change his mind."

They seated themselves on the top step of the dog-trot; near—yet not too near—the swamp angels. They refused the proffered jug. They sat and stared into the pines, into the impenetrable darkness of the swamp . . . felt the night close in on them like something tangible. Like black velvet. Heard the voice of the swamp: hoarse croaking of frogs, chirping of crickets . . . other sounds; vague, scarcely discernible . . . symphony of death.

The swamp angels drank steadily. Drank until their brains were clouded and their emotions aroused. They talked among themselves, in low voices, fanning their courage to white heat. At nine o'clock Jeff Butler's elongated figure lifted from a chair. He said, "Time to git goin'."

They moved slowly at first, adjusting their progress to Babe and Dan Creedon who were unaccustomed to the woods at night.

Dan's face was stony. Babe clung to his arm. But whatever of faltering there may have been in her step was due to the uncertain footing. He was sure of that. He did not argue. It was a crazy, reckless enterprise. He had warned her—time and again. But she had blazed with determination to carry through. And Dan Creedon adhered to his own peculiar code. He was sticking it out—whatever the cost . . . not so much because of any desire to avenge the death of his friend, as because it seemed the proper thing to do.

It was an oddly sinister procession which trudged through the blackness of Big Moccasin Swamp. A man from the city and a vividly beautiful woman. Seven alcohol-fogged swamp angels, exalted by false righteousness.

They moved slowly.

They moved toward Cathedral Gardens.

They moved upon Barney Hamilton. To lynch him.

Margaret Hamilton entered the big kitchen and smiled at the huge, ebony Negress who presided there. "Company for supper, Flaggant?"

"Yassum, Miss Margaret—they mos' usually is." Then, "Mistuh Owenby?"

Margaret shook her head. "Not tonight."

"How come not?"

"He's busy."

"Lawdy, Miss Margaret—was I a man I'd have to be awful busy not to come see a purty gal like you?"

"Well he's just that busy. Miss Kay is coming, though."

"Yassum." Flaggant's black eyes twinkled. "Reckon it ain't so long off when Miss Kay will be remainin' heah pummanent."

"Maybe . . ." Margaret looked around the immaculate kitchen. "Isn't this Zoro's night off?"

"Yassum."

"Then I'll help with supper."

"No'm—that's the most thing you ain't gwine do. So git you gone." Flaggant made clucking noises and Margaret fled. She passed through the hall and thence onto the veranda.

Kay was with Barney and their faces were turned toward the sunset. They walked down to the lagoon, unconscious of the striking picture they afforded: a picture of healthy youth, of youth oblivious to everyone and everything save themselves: Barney tall and broad and blond; Kay looking infinitesimal beside him. They disappeared behind a screen of radiant azalea.

They seated themselves on a bench of hewn cypress logs, and for a few moments neither spoke. Night was closing upon them. Barney's first words were light. His lips smiled, but his gray eyes were serious.

"Behold," he said, "the figure of a young man about to do something."

Kay sensed that there was something deeper than badinage in Barney's words. She knew that he was more serious than she had seen him for days. And so she asked, "To do what?"

Barney laughed. Awkwardly. As though in apology for his embarrassment.

"Want to hear all about it, honey?"

"Yes . . ."

"Well . . ." He took a deep breath. " . . . it sounds screwy coming from me, but then I've never deceived you about being the undisputed world's champion ne'er-do-well."

She said, "You used to be proud of that title."

"Used to be is right. Maybe it was my fault, maybe the fault of the way I'd been raised. So much of everything I wanted—when I wanted it—that I never could see an awful lot of sense in minor things like jobs and ambition. I—well, I don't even know how to describe what I mean."

"I understand."

"Sure you do. Anyway . . ." and he motioned toward the great aisle under the archway of cypress, "anyway, this gives me courage to continue. It seems as though a certain young man is beginning to see the light. He yearns to go forth and make history. He desires to lay the world at the tiny feet of his lady fair. Which reminds me, do you happen to like worlds?"

Kay tried to answer lightly, but could not. She said, "I like you, Barney." Then, after a moment of silence, "What are you planning?"

"I don't know exactly. I—well, I'm not kidding myself, either. I—well, I'm wanting to start something which will allow me to support a wife—provided I can find one with black hair and hazel eyes who answers to the name of Kay."

She put her warm little hand over his. "Go ahead, Barney."

"I've been thinking, a rare thing for me. I've been talking to Mother. And I'm not foolish enough to believe that Beverly offers any particular opportunity to an ambitious young man. Seriously, honey—I'm planning to check out."

She was startled.

"Leaving?"

"Eventually, yes. Naturally I'm not going until this—well, until this Kirk Reynolds affair is all cleared up. Sooner or later they'll find out who did it . . ."

"She faced him squarely. 'I thought you did—at first.'"

"So did everybody else." The laughter had died from his lips. "But I don't play that way."

"I'm trying to believe you."

"You have my word."

Her lips were tight. "I do believe you—now."

"Yes," he said. "You must. It's been a rotten mess from the beginning. And, as I was saying—when it clears up, I'm going."

"Why?"

He laughed. "I know what you're thinking: That Mother has done a swell job. That she's not only caused something beautiful to be created—but that she's made a commercial success of it. Well, listen, honey, Mother was doing a bigger job than that. She was trying to make something out of her moderately virtuous but highly indifferent son . . . and she wouldn't think she had succeeded if she found me willing to spend the rest of my life here collecting dollars from tourists. Nope . . . I'm commencing to suspect that life can be grimmer—and pleasanter—than that. It'll be New York."

"Doing what?"

"Learning something and working at it. Starting seven rungs below the bottom and casting impatience out of the office-window. I can get a job. Dad had lots of friends, and while, at first, they won't believe I'm serious—they'll find out soon enough." He shrugged his broad shoulders. "I feel like a sap, talking this way. Little Rollo . . . but I happen to mean it."

She said, "I know you do, this time."

"And I'll keep on meaning it. It's funny that Beverly could have taught me what New York never could. I suppose that's what Mother really had in mind."

Babe stared at the swamp angels.

They were silent for a long time: close, mentally and physically. The day slipped away beyond the cypress trees and azalea bushes; the hush of night enfolding them; there was an incredible serenity. Her voice was very tiny, there in the soft blackness. She said, "You'll make the grade, Barney."

"You really think so?"

"I know it."

Banter had gone from his manner. The arms that went about her were strong arms. The lips that she turned up to his were wide and eager and frank. And if his face was lost to her through a mist of happiness, if—for the first time in weeks—she felt a sense of fulfillment and security—that was only natural. She said, "Everything's all right now, isn't it, dear?" and he answered by drawing her closer . . . and closer . . . until it seemed that there had been no trouble, no agony of soul, no stark reality.

They rose then and walked hand-in-hand toward the house. Their young faces were grave. Mrs. Hamilton saw—and made no comment. She was wise in her generation: a tolerant and understanding mother.

The supper was served late. It was simple and tasty. The conversation about the table was light and pleasant and subdued. Occasionally Barney's eyes would meet Kay's as though to say: "You see, everything is right and tranquil now."

They finished the meal and strolled out onto the veranda. The heavens were sprinkled with stars, and the light from the big hallway sent a faint yellow glow out upon the lawn. Barney and Kay sat together in the porch swing, hands clasped; frankly and unashamedly happy. There was little conversation. It was too beautiful, too peaceful.

And then the serenity of the night was shattered by the slamming of the front door, and the descent of a huge, frightened Negress. Flaggant was babbling, "Oh, my Gawd, Mistuh Barney . . . Oh, my Gawd!"

Kay caught her breath sharply. All the old terror came to the surface again. She scarcely heard Mrs. Hamilton's tense question.

"What's the matter, Flaggant?"

"Oh, Lawdy, Miss Hamilton . . . they's a-comin'!"

"Who?"

Barney had risen. He moved closer to Flaggant and put a firm hand on her shoulder. He said, "What's wrong?"

The Negro woman was babbling. "They's a-comin', Mistuh Barney. They got guns. I seen 'em."

"You saw who?"

"Them menfolks. White trash from the swamp. You run, Mistuh Barney—run quick."

Barney's voice was brittle. He said, harshly, "Snap out of it, Flaggant. What's happening?"

The woman was sobbing. "They's comin' the back way, Mistuh Barney. White trash with guns. I hear'n 'em talkin'." They was sayin' . . . that they was sayin' . . . that they was sayin' . . .

Barney pushed her away. His young face was grim. "Get inside: all of you."

He walked inside with them. He gave no evidence of fear. He went to the hall closet—under the stairway—and took therefrom a double-barreled shot-gun. He produced a box of shells and slipped two into the chambers. He put a half-dozen more in his coat pocket.

"Barney!" It was Kay talking—breathless, frightened. "What are you doing?"

He moved toward the veranda. There were sounds outside: the angry, guttural voice of a mob.

Barney said, in a voice which was cold and flat, "I'm going outside to see what they want."

Kay followed, splendidly unafraid.

She said, simply, "I'm going with you, Barney."

CHAPTER XVI

They were grim shadows in the night—seven men from Big Moccasin Swamp, plus Dan Creedon and the woman who was known as Babe. The light from the house cascaded down the steps of the veranda and marked a faint, yellow path across the emerald lawn, limning their sinister figures, shining upon the dark, ugly barrels of shot-guns and upon the coiled rope which one man carried.

Kay stood beside Barney. Her hand was on his arm and she knew that his muscles were taut. He did not move. His cheeks were white, but his eyes were level and cold, his feet firmly planted. He held his double-barreled shot-gun as a bird-hunter holds it, right hand caressing the trigger guard, left hand on the barrel. Ready.

Kay heard the front door open—and close. Mrs. Hamilton and Margaret joined them. Barney spoke, without moving his eyes from the tableau near the azalea bushes. He said, "You-all get back in the house."

Kay's answer came quietly. "I'm staying right here."

"I can handle this."

Kay said nothing more. Neither did Mrs. Hamilton nor Margaret. But they remained. Inwardly terrified; outwardly unafraid. Thoughts raced through Kay's mind: "I did this" . . . "I've heard of lynching mobs . . . never saw one before" . . . "I wonder why I feel so cold . . ." Disconnected thoughts. Angry thoughts. She heard Barney's voice: hard and mature.

"What do you want?"

A tall, gangling figure detached itself from the shadowy group. Jeff Butler said, hoarsely, "We come fo' you, Barney Hamilton."

"Yes . . . ?" A suspended query. A grim pause.

"Yeh, we come fo' you."

"Why?"

"You'll dam' soon find out why."

Barney whispered, "Won't you please get back into the house?" The women beside him did not move.

Another voice came from the mob, an unpleasant, nasal voice. "We don't aim to leave no murderers go free."

Jeff Butler again, "You're a-goin' to git strung up."

"For what?"

"Murderin' Kirk Reynolds: that's what. An' fo' lots mo' things."

A woman's voice: Babe Henkel's voice . . . bit into the night.

"Quit wastin' time! Go get him!"

Kay thought, "It's that Henkel woman. She must have loved Kirk a lot."

Barney raised his voice. He spoke directly to Babe. "I suppose this was your idea."

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because the law won't touch you. Because they told me to get out of town. Because you killed Kirk."

"I didn't kill him."

Her voice cut sharply at Jeff Butler. "Well, what are you waiting for?"

Jeff said, "Better come with us. We ain't to be fooled with."

Another voice, "We got guns."

Barney said, "I've got a gun, too. And the first man who takes a step in this direction gets a load of buckshot."

The mob hesitated. It milled about and murmured. It had not anticipated armed resistance. Kay heard someone say, "He wouldn't shoot," and somebody else answered, "You're crazy. Any man'll shoot if he has to."

Jeff Butler said, "Git them ladies inside. We don't crave to hurt them."

Another pause. The lynchers were uncertain. Hanging a man was one thing; firing into three women was something entirely different. Kay knew what they were thinking, and she was glad. And she wasn't afraid any more. That is, not very. Barney was so quiet, so steady . . .

Babe asked, sharply, "What is this, a debating society?"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

ISAIAH: FORETELLING THE BIRTH OF THE MESSIANIC KING

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 7:14; 9:1-7; 11:1-5.
GOLDEN TEXT—His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.—Isaiah 9:6.

Christ is coming! Christ has come! Christ is coming again! All three of these great truths are declared by Holy Scripture. In our lesson for today we study the prophecy of His birth which was given by Isaiah about 750 years before the event took place, and with it we find many beautiful details concerning His blessed character and accomplishments. It is entirely appropriate that the lesson for today should be taken from the Old Testament and relate to the prophecy of the coming of the Messianic King, thus binding together the Old and the New Testaments. Isaiah's prophecy prepares us to study His life in the Gospel of Matthew, beginning next week.

I. The Coming of the King (7:14; 9:1-6).

To us it is entirely understandable that the Son of God was to become flesh and dwell among us and that all the grace and power of God should be upon Him, for we know that He did come in perfect fulfillment of the Scriptures. But let us not fail to note the marvel of this revelation made centuries in advance through God's prophet.

1. Born of a Virgin (7:14; 9:6).

He was to be born. Christ did not come as a fully matured divine being after the fashion of the so-called gods of mythology, but He entered our needy world as the Babe of Bethlehem's manger. What infinite condescension!

He was to be born of a virgin, and so He was. There are those who would minimize the importance of this, or try to explain it away by interpreting the word "virgin" to mean a young married woman. The late Robert Dick Wilson, an outstanding authority, says, "The great and only difficulty lies in disbelief in predictive prophecy and in the almighty power of God, or in the desire to throw discredit on the divine Sonship."

2. God with Us (7:14).

"Immanuel" means "God with us." Isaiah had a foregleam of the incarnation which brought the eternal Son of God into that God-man relationship which was absolutely indispensable if there was to be redemption. Sin had made a barrier between God and man which man could not pass, and only as the God-man, Christ Jesus, came through that barrier to be "God with us," could there be any hope of our salvation.

3. A Great Light (9:2).

The Messiah was to break through the dense darkness of sin and sorrow to bring light and joy. How gloriously that prophecy has been fulfilled!

II. The Character of the King (9:6; 7; 11:1-5).

The prophet foretold not only the meaningful names of the coming Messiah, but pictured in glowing beauty the mighty things which He was to accomplish.

1. Revealed by His Names (9:6).

"Wonderful"—that word has been so misused that it means comparatively little to us. It really fulfills its true meaning in Christ. He is unique, remarkable, yes, truly wonderful. "Counsellor"—in every detail of life, great or small, an infallible guide. "Mighty God"—not just like God, or representing God; Christ is God. "Everlasting Father"—the tender and loving, unfailing One to whom time does not bring any change, for He is the "Father of eternity." "Prince of Peace"—He is not yet the ruler of the nations of the world, hence we hear not only of wars but of rumors of wars. Mark it well that there will be no enduring peace until He comes to reign whose right it is to reign, the divine Prince of Peace.

2. Revealed by His Deeds (9:7; 11:1-5).

Eternal justice and righteousness, peace, wisdom, understanding, counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of God, unfailing equity—all these glorious accomplishments are to characterize the Messiah according to Isaiah's prophecy.

Has the prophecy been fulfilled? We know that all of these qualities were in Christ when He came to earth the first time, but the complete fulfillment of this prophecy awaits that day toward which the child of God looks with joy and hope when Christ shall come again. As we study this portion of our lesson, our hearts should cry out with John, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus!" (Rev. 22:20).

To Gain Truth

Truth is never learned in any department of industry by arguing, but by working and observing; and, when you have got hold of one truth for certain, 10 others will grow out of it. The assertion of truth is to be always gentle.—Ruskin.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Soak Dried Fruits.—Raisins, dates, currants and figs blend better with other ingredients if they are soaked for five minutes in a little boiling water.

With Roast Beef.—Nests of mashed potatoes, browned and filled with creamed peas, carrots or green beans, make effective garnishes for roast beef.

Mildew on Leather.—Petroleum ointment will remove mildew from leather furniture.

Patchwork Quilts.—When making patchwork quilts baste patches onto brown paper and stitch on machine. Tear off paper when stitching is done.

Care of Woodenware.—Woodenware used in mixing foods should be scalded often.

Fruit Sandwiches.—Put some dates or figs through a mincer and mix with some finely chopped nuts. Add a few drops of lemon juice, mix with cream cheese, and spread on slices of brown buttered bread.

Whistler Couldn't Pass Up Opportunity to Use Bailiffs

Mrs. A. M. Moncrieff, who has just celebrated her eighty-eighth birthday, knew many of the great Victorians in the days when, as Nita Gaetano, she was a celebrated singer—and tells some good stories about them.

Once she dined with Whistler, the famous artist, whose pictures now sell for fabulous sums. Two manservants were waiting at table.

"You must be doing well, selling a lot of paintings," she remarked, a little surprised that Whistler should "splash" in this way.

"No," whispered her host. "They're bailiffs. I thought they might as well be doing something useful."

Tinley Park Community NEWS

HIGH LEAGUE, TINLEY PARK METHODIST CHURCH

On Sunday evening, Nov. 20, 1938 the High League of the Methodist church of Tinley Park was organized. In December 4, Mrs. Weinreich was chosen as the League's sponsor.

During the course of the first year, the League has steadily grown and increased in unity.

The most noticeable accomplishment of the year was the trip to Kansas City. It was a fantastic dream when first mentioned. But through the efforts of all in the League the dream was realized. Maybe it was a daring undertaking, but it brought the League closer together, and gave an experience which any participant could never forget.

There were many social gatherings which afforded much pleasure to the young people who might otherwise not have known these entertaining hours.

This League has helped put its members into the spirit of carrying on the ideals of their church. It has brought its members closer to their pastor and church as a whole.

The League has given the young people experience in leadership, has helped them to become forward in expressing themselves, and has given them opportunity to express their opinions of different matters.

All in all, this League has given much to its young people in the past year, and I am sure you are all with me in hoping for a greater and more prosperous League in the future.

James Zimmerman, Retiring Sec'y

The new officers of the High League elected Sunday, September 17, are as follows:

President: James Zimmerman, 1st vice president, Irene Lahti; 2nd vice president, Vernon Brandeau, 3rd vice president, Violet Bettenhausen; 4th vice president, Lorraine Miller; secretary, Edna Yunker; Treasurer, Norma Schleuter; piano player, Eva Bennet, assistant piano player, Violet Bettenhausen.

On October 1, an achievement program and installation of officers will be presented to the public. October 10 a roller skating party will be given by the League.

BOWLING NEWS

Despite all the heat the fellows really got in there and "let em rip." Kranz burned them up with a 575. Davis picked a cherry in the last frame but still took high game with 232. In the lower bracket Roecker got hot with a 546 series while Ceit-haml took high game with 196.

The Tinley Park fishermen who recently went on a fishing trip of over 800 miles into the wilds of Canada, have returned and brought over 600 pounds of fish with them. The Community Firemen's Association will hold their next meeting at Steger next Monday night.

The Tinley Park Fire Department was called out on a number of grass fires last week, but no serious damage is reported.

SUNSHINE 4-H NEWS

The Sunshine 4-H Club met at the home of their leader, Mrs. Kampe on last Thursday night. The chief business was the annual fall play and achievement program. Several plays were examined of which one will be selected by the leader. It was decided to have a style show of the girls in the clothing they made on our achievement program. Bernice Bettenhausen gave a talk on standard workmanship in sewing and a comedy reading was given by Laura Wille after which a lovely lunch of orangeade and cookies was served by Mrs. Kampe.

PEARL WILLE,
Club Reporter

Quite a number of Tinley Park people attended the home coming and fall festival at Mokena last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gotham gave a bachelor dinner Thursday night in honor of Dick Swisher who will embark on the sea of matrimony next Sunday.

The Tinley Park Legion Post met Tuesday night in monthly meeting. The first meeting in September of the W. B. A. was held in the school hall, Thursday, Sept. 14th with the new president, Mildred Sayre in the chair. The blanket club which the W.B.A. has started had the first award presentation, Mrs. Woods being the first winner and Lillian Batterman, second.

The flower exhibit which Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Wilkman arranged for W.B.A. at the recent flower show, won a red ribbon. The meeting ended with the serving of ice cream and cake by Mrs. Barsh, Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. Atkins.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all our relatives neighbors and friends for their many kindnesses shown us during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father; we also wish to thank Rev. Alb. Buddenhagen for his comforting words, the singers and all those who sent floral tributes and donated the use of their cars.

Orland P.T.A. Pays Tribute To Mary Kramer

The following memorial was paid to the memory of the late Mary Kramer by the Orland P.T.A. at their opening meeting of the new school year last Thursday night:

"As is usual at the first meeting of every new year for this organization there are many new faces present and many old ones missing. Tonight we will look in vain for a face that has been familiar and dear to us for many years. Mary Kramer will never again answer present at our roll call or under the 'reports of committees', rise and tell of the number of sick calls she has made or the cheer that she was privileged to bring to our sick or distressed members.

"For Mary Kramer is dead. "On July 19th, 1939, the final summons came and Mary Kramer answered the Master's call. Though it came with very little warning, we know that she was ready and that the record of her life and actions made her journey to the Throne Most-High easy and sure and we are confident that, upon her arrival there she was greeted with those welcome words 'Well Done thou good and faithful servant. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.'

"Mary Kramer had been a member of the Orland P.T.A. for many years and though her own children had passed school age, was unfailing in her allegiance to P.T.A. principles and tireless in her efforts to advance the work of the organization. For many years she had served as chairman of the sick committee and few Orland homes have not had, at one time or another, a call from 'Aunt Mary' (as she was affectionately called), spreading sunshine and cheer when cheer was most needed.

"Mary Kramer lived a useful Christian life. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother, a true friend, a good neighbor and a useful citizen. Her passing leaves a vacant place in our association and in our community that it will be hard to fill.

"Be it therefore resolved: That a copy of the foregoing be spread upon our records as a memorial and that a copy be sent to the family of our departed member, Mary Kramer, as an expression of the sorrow and the sympathy of the Orland Park Parent Teachers Association."

ORLAND PARK

Owen Jungles was pleasantly surprised on his 14th birthday anniversary last Thursday, when his mother entertained a group of his friends at what was called "a golden birthday party".

Bunco was played and prizes were awarded to June Schussler, Pete Uthe, Lois Maddox.

Refreshments were served out on the lawn. Twenty-four guests were present.

The Orland Park Woman's Club held their first fall meeting of this year last Thursday afternoon in the Creer hall.

Mrs. J. P. Edwards, State Chairman spoke on the plans and program of the garden department of the state.

Mr. R. Standard, horticulturist of the Garfield Park Conservatory gave an interesting talk on the propagation of plants. He exhibited several species of the plants and demonstrated how to make cuttings.

The club decided to purchase a flag to be used at the meetings.

A representative to the Red Cross was appointed to go to the Chicago headquarters to learn how to make surgical dressings.

The Garden Department of the Club has founded a new class for study of plants and gardens. The first meeting of this class was held at the home of Mrs. Ella Loebe on Wednesday.

Any persons interested in gardening are invited to join this class.

Mrs. Orville Schmadeke and infant son are visiting with the former's parents, at Lakewood, Ohio. A large number of Orland people attended the Mokena Home Coming last week end.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burkhardt entertained the latter's nephew Warren Witt and bride of Hammond the past week.

Mrs. C. E. Haehnlein has just returned from the Woodlawn hospital where she underwent an operation for a cataract on her right eye, eleven days ago. She is getting along fine, having come thru the operation splendidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Burkhardt and children of Chicago are spending two weeks here at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Burkhardt.

ALL-STAR SWAMP TEXACO

The Southwest Suburban All-Stars swamped the Texaco club of Lockport 15 to 3 at the Worth field Sunday.

The All Stars got hits in all but the 5th inning. Mahaffey of Palos-led the hitting by getting three of four while playing five innings. E. Uthe, J. Robb, Faber, Broenecke, Lode and Nicolai collected two hits each. Macuk and Ludwig got 2 each for Lockport.

Nicolai started on the mound for the victors and pitched four innings in which he allowed one run on hits while striking out six. Morganthaler, his successor, pitched five innings, allowing two runs on three hits while striking out seven.

Sinise started on the mound for Lockport but was shelled out in four innings when he was nicked for 11 runs on 11 hits. Cleary and Johnson finished the game in order.

The All Stars were picked by the managers of the eight teams in the league. They were managed by Dr. Nicolai of Orland with Sid Traub of Palos and Herb Stewart of Worth serving as coaches. The manager and coaches wish to thank all the players for participating in this game.

Mokena Home Coming Grosses Over $900; Many Prizes Awarded

An orchestra of Rock Island employees from Chicago, furnished the dance music for that evening. The Hill-Billy orchestra of Frankfort, also played for some of the dances.

Sunday afternoon and evening the Australian Whip Crackers were on the entertainment program. There was a band concert by the Mokena band and the Festival wound up with dancing up to midnight.

The finance committee of the Mokena Civic Association reports that the festival grossed over $900, but the exact amount cleared will not be determined until the meeting of the Association next Monday evening.

Plans are already under way for a bigger and better Home Coming next fall. Tentative plans call for either a Merry-Go-Round or Electric train rides for the kiddies. According to plans now being considered, next year the festival grounds will be extended so as to take in all of the railroad grounds from the depot west to Wolf Road.

American Industry Hates War

War destroys lives. War wrecks homes. Economic chaos and years of crushing depression are its inevitable aftermath. It imperils representative democracy. Free institutions are among its early victims.

Ultimately no one can escape the ruin of war.

American industry wants peace. Peace is the life blood of progress. Peace must be the national objective.

Industry's position on this matter has been stated repeatedly and there must be no misunderstanding about it.

The United States can stay out of war. Emotionalism can betray us into war. A public will to peace, coupled with wise public policies and affirmative action to this end by our government will keep us out of war. A fatalistic attitude that war is inevitable for us is absurd. It presupposes that America cannot conduct itself intelligently to preserve peace and its own interests.

Europe's problems do affect us, but our domestic problems still must come first.

If yesterday industry was the only source of prosperity and re-employment, today it is as well the key, stone of preparedness and peace. Under any conditions, America must depend on a smoothly functioning, efficient industrial system.

Manufacturers will not relax their efforts to achieve and maintain sound improvement in our domestic economy.

Industry opposes profiteering—the utilization of war psychology to boost prices for the purpose of making excessive profits.

As manufacturers, the National Association of Manufacturers recognizes it to be their responsibility and moral obligation to conduct their businesses so that the prices of the products they produce and sell are related equitably to production costs.

They pledge their energetic support to this policy.

The N. A. M. calls upon all its members to exercise vigilance against any price or profit policies not justified by ACTUAL cost and anticipated cost of replacement.

Months ago this Association said: "No sensible person believes that profit can come out of the wreckage of human life and economic dilapidation."

The use of this crisis as an excuse either to extort unjustifiable profits or to pursue partisan political objectives is not only indefensible and dangerous, but reprehensible morally. Nor should pleas of "emergency" be utilized as an excuse for reaching objectives which the American people would not otherwise sanction.

The present situation calls for agreement on common objectives, but the democratic process of consultation and criticism must never be abandoned. Otherwise, we shall be following in the footsteps of those who believe in government by coercion.

In a world distraught by force the best way to preserve representative democracy is to practice it.

The N. A. M. calls upon all its members to exercise vigilance against any price or profit policies not justified by ACTUAL cost and anticipated cost of replacement.

Months ago this Association said: "No sensible person believes that profit can come out of the wreckage of human life and economic dilapidation."

The use of this crisis as an excuse either to extort unjustifiable profits or to pursue partisan political objectives is not only indefensible and dangerous, but reprehensible morally. Nor should pleas of "emergency" be utilized as an excuse for reaching objectives which the American people would not otherwise sanction.

The present situation calls for agreement on common objectives, but the democratic process of consultation and criticism must never be abandoned. Otherwise, we shall be following in the footsteps of those who believe in government by coercion.

In a world distraught by force the best way to preserve representative democracy is to practice it.

war. Emotionalism can betray us into war. A public will to peace, coupled with wise public policies and affirmative action to this end by our government will keep us out of war. A fatalistic attitude that war is inevitable for us is absurd. It presupposes that America cannot conduct itself intelligently to preserve peace and its own interests.

Europe's problems do affect us, but our domestic problems still must come first.

If yesterday industry was the only source of prosperity and re-employment, today it is as well the key, stone of preparedness and peace. Under any conditions, America must depend on a smoothly functioning, efficient industrial system.

Manufacturers will not relax their efforts to achieve and maintain sound improvement in our domestic economy.

Industry opposes profiteering—the utilization of war psychology to boost prices for the purpose of making excessive profits.

As manufacturers, the National Association of Manufacturers recognizes it to be their responsibility and moral obligation to conduct their businesses so that the prices of the products they produce and sell are related equitably to production costs.

They pledge their energetic support to this policy.

FIELD DAYS

THOMSON'S TOP YIELD HYBRID CORN SEED FIELDS

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY
SEPTEMBER, 21, 22, 23

Visiting these seed fields will enable farmers to understand why Thomson's Hybrid is the top-yielding hybrid in this region. In 1938 Thomson's fields yielded the most vigorous seed under excess moisture conditions. A visit to the fields in 1939 will show you why Thomson fields are enabled to mature the most vigorous seed under present extreme drouth conditions.

Visit the fields and not only see how the best seed is produced for you, but how it excels seed produced elsewhere in the region. Seed fields are located on Lincoln Highway (U. S. 30) one half mile west of the junction with U. S. 45.

Remember the dates—September 21, 22 and 23

U. S. Citizens Stay in China Despite Two Years of War

SHANGHAI'S BUND. Here along the historic Shanghai Bund many of the Americans living in China perform their daily tasks. Most of the buildings in this region are foreign owned. The Bund borders on the Wangpoo river.

Residents Abroad Live in 'Concessions' of Foreign Nations.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

After two years of war, 7,700 United States citizens are still maintaining residence in China. This number includes women and children, but does not count the enlisted men in the United States armed forces (navy and marines) now on duty in China. In addition to the residents, China has also a wartime quota of venturesome American travelers, seeing the country, pushing through quick business projects, reporting to American newspapers, magazines, or newsreels, or pursuing those unidentified missions which take many to the unquesting Orient.

Although there is a United States court for China, there is no American "concession" to shelter the 7,700 American residents and their transient compatriots. United States concessions were mapped out for Shanghai, for Tientsin, for Amoy, and other ports during the past century. But Shanghai's American area was incorporated into the International Settlement, Tientsin's added to the British, Amoy's merged into the general foreign reservation. A Legation Quarter was set up at Peiping, and the projected American concessions in other cities were dropped.

Center in Shanghai.

Somewhat less than half of the Americans in China live in Shanghai, where the International Settlement and the French Concession together constitute a foreign metropolis within China's largest metropolis; the foreign areas contain as many people (mostly Chinese) as the entire city of Peiping. Peiping has more than 600 Americans, Tientsin more than 400. The only other cities in which more than 75 American residents have remained since Japan has been carrying on military operations in China are Tsingtao, Canton, Nanking, and Hankow. (Previously, American colonies of from 100 to 200 were picturesque parts of a number of less prominent cities, such as Changsha.)

The remaining Americans—about 3,300—are well distributed throughout China's 7,000,000 square miles, either in closely knit little clusters at ports, or in hardy twosomes or singletons at the religious missions scattered inland, frequently separated by days of primitive travel from the company of their compatriots.

'Mother of Radium'

Two dollars' worth of uranium for $10,000 worth of coal! Such is the economical exchange held out for the future by Nobel prize-winner, Professor Joliot of France, following his recent experiments in releasing the vast potential energy of the mineral uranium. Called the "mother of radium," uranium—a white, heavy and metallic element—was discovered in 1789 but was not isolated until 1842. It is one of nature's rarer elements, found especially in pitchblende in combination with other elements, including that dangerous yet priceless substance, radium. From the Ore mountains of former Czechoslovakia, an important source of uranium compounds, came the pitchblende used in the famous early experiments of radium discoverer Madame Curie. Canada and Belgium are large sources of uranium ores. The United States produces considerable at home but must import additional quantities. Uranium's chief use is in the ceramics industry, giving color and luster to glass and china.

Modern Use of Door

Has Odd Background

"Doors, as we know them, are comparatively modern," says the National Geographic Society. "Long after man moved out of the cave and into the hut or house he used no doors. Entrance to the homes of the early Egyptians, Greeks and Romans led usually through doorways covered, for privacy, with tapestry, silk curtains, skins and veils. Even in fairly recent times curious superstitions lingered about the door. In parts of England and Scotland it was customary to open the door whenever someone died in the house in order to let the soul pass through.

U. S. Navy Plans Large Air Base On Kodiak Island

Coast Guard May Join In Developing Project Near Alaska.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Kodiak island, which is soon to become the site of a large United States naval base and air station, and possibly a coast guard base and air station adjoining, is the largest of the Alaskan islands—about a hundred miles long and 50 miles wide.

Kodiak was discovered by Russian fur hunters in 1763, when the sea otter was plentiful, but its fame more recently lies in the fact that it is the native heath of the Kodiak bear, the world's largest carnivorous animal.

The bears roam in 30 to 40 thousand acres of spruce on the island, and in the mountains which rise to nearly 4,000 feet. Much of the interior has been little explored, and the few miles of highway do not penetrate the game preserves.

Fishing Chief Industry.

The chief industry of the island is on the coast—fishing for salmon, herring and halibut. One whaling station handles two hundred whales annually. Vast areas in luxuriant grass would seem capable of supporting large herds of cattle, but there are probably not more than 600 head on the island.

Most inhabitants have small truck gardens, but climatic conditions do not favor extensive agricultural development. A United States agricultural experiment station was abandoned there a few years ago.

Kodiak was prominent in the news of the eruption of Katmai in 1912, though about 90 miles distant from the volcano. The clouds of volcanic ash then enveloped the island in darkness for 60 hours. A foot or more of ash covered the island driving the bears to the coast for food.

BEAR'S HOME. Kodiak island, home of the Kodiak bear, the world's largest carnivorous animal, is to become a U. S. naval base and air station. The island's history is rich in stories of fur-traders' adventures.

Mild Climate.

The Aleutian islands, which trickle off the Alaska peninsula towards Kamchatka, divert the warm Japanese currents to the east, greatly altering Kodiak's temperature. Despite its Labradorian latitude, the island's winters are much milder than Boston, and more nearly approximate the climate of Washington, D. C.

Italians, Portuguese Lead In Brazilian Immigration

For the past 50 years the little country of Portugal, with a population of less than 7,000,000, has averaged more than 60 emigrants a day to Brazil. Italian migration to Brazil has been even greater. In all, Brazilian immigration has exceeded 4,000,000. Italians leading with 1,354,000; Portugal supplying 1,148,000. In addition were 577,000 Spaniards, 177,000 Japanese, 155,000 Germans, 107,000 Russians and 83,000 Austrians. Brazil was claimed for Portugal in 1500, when the Portuguese Admiral Cabral, sailing for India, was blown westward from his course to land on what is now the Brazilian coast.

MAYBE FATHER WILL LIKE THESE? (Recipes Below.)

Foods Men Like to Eat

What are the foods that Father likes best—the fine, old-fashioned dishes—tasty, full of flavor, and perfectly cooked! He likes a meal to be composed of only a few foods; he wants to know what he is eating, and he does not want foods swathed in a blanket of whipped cream. In a word, fancy cooking is apt to be wasted on Father but he'll appreciate good cooking to the limit.

Left to his own devices, many a man would choose a diet of meat, potatoes, and pie. They're not particularly fond of vegetables—these men of ours—and when it comes to salads, it's a sheer waste of energy to serve them anything fancy. So a little judicious planning is necessary on our part in order to give Father his favorite foods and provide a whole, well-balanced meal in the bargain.

Each of these recipes, tested in my own kitchen, I've found to be prime favorites with men. Well prepared and attractively served, they'll go a long way toward establishing your reputation as a good cook.

Vegetable Soup.

(Serves 6)

- 2 pounds soup bone
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 2 quarts cold water
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons barley
- 1 cup canned tomatoes
- 1 onion
- ½ cup carrots (cut in cubes)
- ½ cup celery (cut in small pieces)
- ½ cup potatoes (cut in cubes)
- ½ cup peas

Remove a portion of meat from cracked soup bone and cut into pieces. Brown in hot fat. Place browned meat, soup bone, seasonings, and barley in kettle and add cold water. Cover and cook until boiling point is reached. Then simmer about 2½ hours or until meat is tender. Cool and skim off excess fat. Add vegetables and continue cooking until vegetables are tender.

Devil's Food Cake.

- (Makes one two-layer cake)
- 1½ cups granulated sugar
- 2 ounces chocolate
- 1½ cups milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- ½ cup butter
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups cake flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons baking powder

Place ½ cup sugar, chocolate and 1 cup milk in saucepan and cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Add vanilla extract and cool. Cream butter and add remaining sugar. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks and add slowly. Then add the cooled chocolate mixture. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the remaining milk. Bake in 2 well-greased layer-cake pans in a moderate oven (375 degrees) for approximately 25-30 minutes. Ice with boiled icing.

Apple Pie.

(Makes 1 pie)

- Cheese pastry
- 6 cooking apples
- Flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- Cinnamon
- Nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice

Line a pie tin with pie crust. Peel the apples and cut in slices. Sprinkle the bottom of the pastry with flour, salt and granulated sugar. Pile in the apples, filling very full. Dot with butter and sprinkle with cinnamon, nutmeg, sugar and lemon juice. Cover with the top crust, crimp the edges together and score the top to allow the steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 40 minutes.

Pigs-in-Taters.

(Serves 6)

- 6 large baking potatoes
 - 6 tablespoons margarine
 - 4 to 5 teaspoons milk
 - 1½ teaspoons salt
 - Paprika
 - ½ pound small sausages (cooked)
- Wash and dry potatoes. Place on rack in hot oven (500 degrees), and bake for about 45 minutes, or until the potatoes are done. Cut a slice from one side of each and scoop out the inside. Mash thoroughly, add margarine, salt and paprika. Refill the potato shells. Make a depression in the center of each, and arrange in it 2 or 3 sausages. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 10 minutes, or until brown.

Harvest Moon Doughnuts.

(Makes 24 doughnuts)

- ¼ cup butter
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 2 eggs
 - 4 cups flour
 - 4 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon nutmeg
 - ½ teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Fat for deep fat frying

Cream butter and sugar. Beat in eggs. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with milk. Add vanilla. Roll dough ¼ - inch thick and cut with doughnut cutter. Fry in deep fat at 385 degrees until doughnuts are golden brown on both sides. Drain on absorbent paper. Sugar lightly, if desired.

Hot Water Cheese Pastry.

(Makes 1 2-crust pie)

- ¾ cup shortening
 - 6 tablespoons boiling water
 - 2 cups general purpose flour
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - ½ teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 cup American cheese (grated)
- Place shortening in warm bowl, pour boiling water over it, and cream thoroughly with a fork. Place flour, salt and baking powder in flour sieve and sift gradually into the creamed mixture. Add cheese. Mix thoroughly. Make up into doughball, then chill in refrigerator. When ready to bake remove from refrigerator, divide dough and roll out. Line pastry tin with one portion of the pastry and proceed with desired pie recipe.

Need Help Feeding Father?

WORTH KNOWING

Split hard rolls. Butter and then stuff them with chicken or fish salad. Chopped ham may be added to waffle batter and served with pineapple-orange sauce. Try combining two or more kinds of soup. The resulting mixture may be served in the regular way or used as a sauce for other dishes.

PATTERN DEPARTMENT

IF YOU take a large size, then you'll find 1806 one of the most becoming dresses you ever put on! The long, slim lines of the paneled skirt make your hips look much narrower, and the bodice gathers give correct ease over the bust. With its touch of lace, this will be very smart for bridge parties, luncheons and club affairs. Make it of flat crepe, thin wool and, later on, sheer velvet.

Coat Style Dress.

The "something different" about this practical dress is the way the closing is cut sharply over at the waistline. The design (1681) gives you plenty of lap-over, so that you needn't sew buttons and make buttonholes all the way down. And of course you don't need to be told how easy the coat style is to make, to get into, and to iron.

The Patterns.

No. 1806 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material, with short sleeves; 4¾ yards with long sleeves; 1 yard for vestee.

No. 1681 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material without nap; ¾ yard contrasting; 2¾ yards edging.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Strange Facts

Prying Railroads Home Products Desert Increase

In the early days of the railroads, travelers often aroused suspicion and station agents frequently asked them personal questions. But the Liverpool & Manchester railway went further. Up to 1837 this road made each passenger fill out a ticket application that not only asked his name, address and the purpose of his trip, but also his age, occupation and place of birth.

In "The Westphalian Last Supper," a stained-glass window in St. Mary's cathedral in Soest, Westphalia, Germany, Christ and His disciples are depicted in their customary places at the table, eating Westphalian ham and pumpernickel and drinking Westphalian beer and kummel.

Scattered throughout England are some 400 "camping coaches," or remodeled railroad cars, in which about 50,000 persons each year spend their summer vacations. The coaches, permanently located on beautiful country sidings, accommodate private parties of from 4 to 10 and cost from $10 to $25 a week, which includes linen and tableware.
